Through HSBC in the Arts launched in 2005, the bank continues to support and work with these organisation to not only conserve but also to develop artistic talents for the country.

"HSBC has always been an ardent and long-term supporter of the efforts put in place by the various organisations represented here today," said HSBC's deputy chairman and chief executive officer Datuk Zarir J. Cama at the recent HSBC in the Arts cheque presentation ceremony.

He added that most of the organisations chosen were because of their work in the community especially with the younger generation including writing/ directing workshops, children's outreach programmes and masterclasses.

A total of RM1.3mil was set aside, for HSBC in the Arts this year.

HSBC in the Arts is also a further extension of the bank's contribution in education, as it has always believed that education plays a key role in developing a country and its people.

Through this initiative, the bank hopes that the community will benefit and gain knowledge from the various projects ranging from theatre development, preservation of cultural assets and heritage conservation
